For Immediate Release

Education Association of America Incorporated in Pennsylvania

The Education Association of America has been incorporated in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The EAA aims to increase student academic performance by improving the quality of the education that those students receive. Focused on working with educators and cognitive scientists to craft evidence-based learning strategies and curricula, the EAA is headquartered in Philadelphia, PA.

Asked for the overall strategy for the new company, President and CEO Aiden Gonzalez noted that “[t]he mission of the EAA is and always will be to work directly with educators for educators and their students. We’re going to start out immediately working directly with the community to see what’s working and what needs to be improved to give Philly students the tools they need for success.”

The EAA brings together people who have a lifelong passion for education with educators and learning specialists to form community-centric educational strategies.
